Focusing primarily on the movement’s final decade, the film charts American women’s determined march to the ballot box, and illuminates the myriad social, political and cultural obstacles that stood in their path. The Vote delves into the controversies that divided the nation in the early 20th century - gender, race, state’s rights, and political power - and reveals the fractious dynamics of social change. General Manager’s Message

As I’m writing this, it’s mid August and we’re closing in on the beginning of the end of summer. I don’t know about you, but I’m not looking forward to winter even though I love fall and the cooler temps and beautiful fall colors. It must be an age thing, because winter never bothered me much when I was younger.

I’d like to take a minute to say thank you to all of you, our loyal supporters. The COVID-19 pandemic has resulted in decreased state government and business funding, but our support from members like you has remained stable. THANK YOU! These other revenue shortfalls have certainly negatively impacted our operating budget. We have responded by not filling a few positions of folks that have left us for other jobs. While this is a short-term solution, this is not something that we can continue long-term and still provide all the programming and online services you rely on. We are hopeful that the pandemic will be behind us before too long and our business and state government support comes back as the economy rebounds. Soon we will begin our fall fund drive. If it’s time for you to renew your annual support, or if you would be willing to consider making an additional gift in support of our programming, it would be very much appreciated during this difficult time. It’s fast and easy to make a contribution in support of your favorite programs online at lptv.org. Thanks for your consideration.

In early through mid August, we had several powerful thunderstorms that passed through the area. These severe storms, along with the heavy rains and lightning they bring, damaged some of our broadcast equipment at our tower sites. Fortunately, we have been able to repair equipment quickly and get back on the air with minimum downtime. To help improve our broadcast reliability, we will be doing some work over the next few months to improve how we deliver our signal to our transmitter sites. We’re excited to get this project completed so that we can continue to serve our viewers with a reliable broadcast signal.

I’m also excited to report that very soon (hopefully by the time you’re reading this) we will be live streaming our Lakeland Prime channel 24/7 on our web site. You will also be able to watch our live stream on the pbs.or web site and on Roku devices when this new service is launched. PBS is also working to make our live stream available on mobile devices and other streaming platforms by the end of the year. This has been a long time coming and we have had a lot of folks asking us why we weren’t live streaming our channel. The short answer is because of the lack of programming rights. We didn’t have the rights from PBS and the programming suppliers to stream the content online. This is why we have made Lakeland News available live online, but no PBS programming we air live on Lakeland Prime to date. PBS has been working hard with the programming vendors to secure streaming rights to rectify this and we are pleased to begin this service very soon. At this time, we can only live stream our Lakeland Prime channel. Our other five broadcast channels will not be live streamed due to the lack of programming rights for live streaming. Another issue is that, again due to programming rights, we can only live stream our Lakeland Prime main channel to viewers in our immediate over-the-air service area. If you try to watch outside of our local service area, our local live stream will not play. We are working with PBS on a way for members to log in so that they can watch from anywhere in the US, but we have no timeframe for this solution. Regardless, our ability to live stream our main channel in our region will allow people to watch us in a new way and will also bring us a whole new group of viewers that have chosen to only get their television programming through the internet. We will let you know as soon as our new live stream is available.

As always, thank you for your generous support!

Bill Sanford - CEO
Lakeland PBS
